Limitations on travel and prerequisites for entry:

Requirements for immunisation:

Proof of complete COVID-19 vaccination is still required in several countries. Certain vaccines authorised by their regulatory agencies may be accepted by some (e.g. Pfizer, Moderna AstraZeneca).

Negative COVID-19 Test:

A negative COVID-19 test is required in many countries.

Quarantine Regulation:

Regardless of your immunisation status, it is advised that you keep yourself away from people if you test positive for the virus.

Health Declaration & Travel App:

- To monitor exposure and health status, many nations now require visitors to register via a government app or complete digital health declarations before arrival.

Procedures for travel safety:

These are essential steps to guarantee a safe trip.

- To lower the risk of transmission, travellers should wear masks, bring hand sanitiser, and practice good personal hygiene.
- Transportation companies, hotels, and airlines are putting strict cleaning procedures into place. For check-in, boarding, and payment, contactless technology has been implemented in numerous airports.

See contact details on the last page!

Control of Crowds:

To avoid crowding, many nations have imposed restrictions on the number of visitors to well-known locations

Updates Specific to Destinations:

Europe

Many travel restrictions have been removed by the European Union, such as the Schengen Area being mostly accessible to vaccinated passengers.

Asia

Countries like China and Japan have recently loosened their severe entry regulations while keeping the restriction levels the same, depending on the vaccination status and local infection rates.

North America:

In addition to removing limitations on pandemic travel, the United States and Canada may require masks and proof of immunisation in specific states and provinces.

New Zealand and Australia:

Since they have opened their borders to tourism, these nations keep a careful eye on any new variations.
